Producer Jeremy Bolt says casting three-time Academy Award nominee Joan Allen in his 2008 film “Death Race” was to send the message that “Death Race” is an A film and not a low-class genre movie. “We felt by populating the film with a proven dramatic actor like Joan Allen that message would be clearly conveyed,” says Bolt. One of Allen’s lines in the film: “Shut the fucking computers down now!” Another one: “Okay cocksucker, fuck with me and we’ll see who shits on the sidewalk.”
